

Constructing Excellence Membership

About Membership

Membership of Constructing Excellence offers something unique – an opportunity to be involved in the only industry-wide body operating in the UK built environment industry.

Our values

At Constructing Excellence we believe that industry improvement will be driven by all sectors sharing learning, working together and driving innovation to deliver a demonstrably better built environment.

However, we recognise that there are issues and challenges unique to individual sectors within the built environment industry. This is why we have built our membership scheme around five separate member forums; focusing on:

- buildings & estates
- clients
- housing
- infrastructure
- local government.

Meeting your needs

As a member, your organisation will join a forum of your choice, and from within that forum you will have the opportunity to participate in agenda setting and research; networking groups; and opportunities to showcase your work. You will also have access to the latest measurement and diagnostic tools, as well as a range of business improvement services. There will also be regular opportunities to share, learn from and network with the other sector forums.

The right message

Becoming a member of Constructing Excellence signals to your clients, your supply chain, your people, and the industry that your business is forward thinking, innovative, committed to improvement and committed to excellence.

Why join

Whatever the size of your business, wherever you work in the built environment, and wherever you are in the supply chain, there are many good reasons to join Constructing Excellence.

Influence policy

Constructing Excellence has strong links with industry influencers including key clients; government; the Strategic Forum; the Housing Corporation; and trade and professional bodies. Members have the opportunity to access these key influencers and to formulate the agenda for the industry.

For your business this means the chance to influence Government policies and lead change in the industry to the benefit of your organisation, and the wider industry.

Build relationships

Constructing Excellence members are committed to improvement, for their business and the industry. Members meet regularly at a range of member only, sector specific and pan industry events, conferences and workshops, to network, share knowledge and learn from other leading edge firms.

For your business this means the chance to build business and personal relationships with like minded people from across the supply chain, within your own sector and across the wider industry.

Improve your business performance

Constructing Excellence leads the programme to drive up standards in the UK built environment industry. Members help shape that programme; gain early insight to the latest innovations and thinking about best practice; as well as privileged support to identify areas for improvement.

For your business this means the chance to improve productivity, increase profits, and deliver better projects.

The Sector Forums

BE Forum members are leading edge clients, contractors, consultants, specialists and manufacturers from across the demand and supply chain working together to achieve change in the delivery of the built environment.

CCG supports all clients in the public and private sector, by promoting best practice as a construction client, to deliver better construction outcomes. CCG acts as a credible voice for a wide range of clients.

The Housing Forum has established itself as the only cross sector organisation covering all aspects of housing construction: private, public, and social sectors and their supply chains.

Members of the Infrastructure Task Force are driven by a desire to improve delivery of infrastructure in the UK.

The members of the LGTF care passionately about the people for whom they work, their local communities. They want to deliver to them the highest quality buildings, roads and landscapes at a reasonable price.
